

Cadwall, W. H. H.

London, W.

1820

March 14th, 1914

Professor Caldwell,

McGill University.

Dear Professor Caldwell:

I congratulate you on the publication of another book, the announcement of which I had already seen, and on the reception that it has already had. I am afraid, however, that it will be impossible for me to read the book for some time to come, as I am so immersed in duties that must be attended to that I have little time left for reading, and what little time I have found it necessary to put on some work that I have promised to do in the way of writing. A review by such a man as our Professor Prett would I know be competent. Very probably he may have read the book as he is omnivorous in his reading.

Yours sincerely,

President.